Town of Recklinghausen Put Under Martial Law Following Disturbances

POINCARÉ IN REPLY

Declares Geymans Want to Renew War of 1871 and Occupy France

Recklinghausen, Germany, Mar. 12.—Eight Germans are dead as the result of clashes with French troops in various parts of the Recklinghausen district last night. One French soldier and three Germans were wounded in a riot at Dortmund.

A state of siege has been declared in the entire Recklinghausen district in consequence of these disturbances.

Two Frenchmen, one an officer and the other a civilian railroad man, were assassinated Saturday night in the streets of the mining town of Bouer, near Recklinghausen.

Each body, when found, had five bullet wounds in it. One of the victims was Lieut. Col. Tim of the chassours and the other M. Joey, chief of the Suer railroad station. Unrest and discontent among the population of the Recklinghausen district have been smoldering for several days. Fighting was running high on both sides Sunday.

The slaying of the Frenchman is considered the most serious affair since the occupation began. The French general commanding the district ordered the arrest of the burgomaster of Suer, his assistant, the chief of police and two other town officials.

All being held by the French as hostages.

The French authorities asserted today that a penalty of at least one hundred million marks would be imposed on the town of Suer, that all of the cafes, moving picture shows and other public places would be closed and that German civilians will not be permitted on the streets after 7 o'clock in the evening until after the excitement subsides. No trace of the slayers has been found.

Indications of resumption of active resistance among German officials was reported by French intelligence officers during the last week. Several German secret organizations are said to have been formed to oppose the French in every way. One of these is known as "The Young Germans." Several of its leaders have been arrested. Most of the leaders, the French say, are young miners or factory workers.

The mines in the Recklinghausen district, three of which are state mines, are in operation.

IRELAND IN BLACK DESPAIR OVER RIOTING

Only Members of Cabinet Are Truly Optimistic in Face Of Strife

Endeavor to "Carry on" While Business Slumps and Idle Increase

BY MILTON BRONNER, NEA Staff Correspondent.

Dublin, March 13. Boom! It's the blast of high explosives. A few minutes later a congenial official enters the office of the Free State cabinet minister with whom I am conversing.

"Maybe you heard the explosion, sir," he says. "I just wanted to tell you that they have blown up Pauley Mahon's printing works."

One's first impression after this beginning of a sunny day is that "tragic" would not accurately describe the capital of the new Free State today.

Two Sides to Picture.
The situation is two-sided: Throngs of pretty, well-dressed young women shopping in fashionable Grafton street, gaunt, timorous women following you a block on Suffolk street begging a penny. Young squires in from the country on perfectly groomed horses and themselves in perfectly tailored clothes; newsboys walking the ice-cold pavements in bare feet.

A handsome new department store opening its doors on wide O'Connell street; a stone's throw away a whole block of artillery-smashed and fire-wrecked wreckage of hotels and business houses.

A committee meeting to hear reports of damage wrought to farmhouses by torch piled by irregulars; another commission meeting to consider how to improve Ireland's canal system.

Stern suppression of British newspapers which print irregular propaganda; walls of public buildings defaced by defiant sentences painted there at night by daring bands of young women opposed to the Irish Free State.

People complaining about the high cost of bread; others about how dear violets are.

Employment exchanges crowded with men and women seeking jobs; fashionable hotels and restaurants crowded with men and women drinking tea and eating fancy cakes.

Despair Takes Hold.
It seems a mad world, but in essence is the same as New York or Cleveland or Los Angeles or any other city. There are the same contrasts of rich and poor, of the comfortable and the comfortless, the law-abiding and the lawless, of good and evil.

LIQUOR CASE IN U. S. COURT

Defendant in Liquor Case Tells How Incident Is Supposed to Have Happened

Charles Root, farmer, who attended a dance at the Fort Berthold reservation, was tried in federal court on a liquor charge today, when he didn't even get a drink, according to his testimony.

The explanation given by Root to the jury was that a man at the dance suggested there was a drink in a bottle along the fence and he and another man went out and kicked the bottle and as he did this, two Indians jumped up and declared they were arrested.

Government attorneys, however, told the jury not to under emphasize the importance of the situation, stating that Congress had provided very severe penalties regarding liquor on Indian reservations. The case was given to the jury before noon today.

Root, said by his attorney to be a respectable farmer, had gone to a dance with his wife and with another man and his wife. Root said they took no liquor and did not drink any at the dance. He then related the incident of how a man suggested they go out and kick along the fence for a bottle supposed to contain liquor.

The government attorneys had not furnished attorneys for the defense this morning with a bill of particulars in the C. R. Jonist case, but were expected to do so this afternoon. There may be other preliminaries before the case starts.

4 CANDIDATES IN FIELD FOR CITY PLACES

Two Incumbents and Two Others to Seek Places on City Commission

MUST PETITION SOON

Filing of Petitions for Entrance Into City Race Ends on Wednesday

Four candidates were in the field today for city commissioner as the time for filing of petitions for the election, April 3, neared. Petitions must be filed not later than Wednesday night of this week. There will be two registration days before the election.

Candidates for city commissioner—two places to be filled—included J. P. French and John A. Larson, whose terms expire, A. C. Hinckley and F. W. Murphy. It is possible there will be no other candidates before the time for filing petitions ends.

No outstanding issues have as yet been put forward. The newest issue thus far is that the two incumbents state in their platform that they favor municipal ownership of all public utilities, which are the electric light plant, water works and the gas plant.

Each candidate was asked by the Tribune to make a statement as to what he stands for in the election. Mr. French said that he had no particular statement to make regarding his candidacy, stating that "people know me and what I stand for." His platform, he added, speaks for itself. It is on petitions as follows: "Cleaner, better, larger city; a square deal for all, municipal ownership of water works and all public utilities."

A. C. Hinckley said that "my platform simply is better streets and lower taxes." He said that if he went on the commission he would be expected to be given charge of the streets, a place he occupied before on the commission, and added that "everyone knows how the streets were taken care of when I was on the commission."

F. W. Murphy said today that he has consented to petitions being circulated for the office of city commissioner after some consideration of requests made, and that having decided to permit circulation of petitions he was out to do the best he could to be elected.

"I believe generally in reducing taxes is possible," he said, "in obtaining some adequate water works, and that the city's business ought to be run just the same as any other business concern."

Mr. Murphy has been a resident of the city since 1905, and is owner of the Rose apartments. Mr. Larson had not prepared a statement on his candidacy today. Candidates in the field for police magistrates include W. C. Cassman, incumbent, and Justice W. S. Cassman. Anton Bear, candidate at the last election, said he would not be a candidate. Nick Peters is a candidate for city justice of the peace.

ONE JUROR IN MURDER CASE BARS VERDICT

Foreman Reports in Open Court That Jury Stands 11 to One

GIVEN MORE TIME

After Report Is Made Monday Morning, Other Court Business Goes Ahead

JURY DISCHARGED.
The jury in district court in the Kasimir Schneider murder case was discharged about 2:45 o'clock this afternoon. The jury stood at the finish; it was understood, 11 to 1 for conviction.

One juror was today preventing agreement among the 12 men holding the Kasimir Schneider murder case. This report was made to District Judge Janonius this morning, after the jury had been out from five o'clock Friday afternoon, and the jury was to deliberate a few more hours before its final report was accepted.

The jury stood 11 to 1 for conviction almost from the start, it is understood.

When Judge Janonius called the jury in at 9:30 o'clock this morning, Foreman Davis reported the situation to the court, but did not say whether the jury was in majority for conviction or acquittal. He reported that there did not appear to be any chance of an agreement. He did say, however, that there were a few points the minority member had debated over, and was not quite clear on. Foreman Davis said the discussion throughout had been free from anger.

Emphasizes Importance.
Judge Janonius told the jury that they had been very patient and had worked hard. He explained that the case had required several days for trial, that the defendant was entitled to be relieved from strain if the jury could agree upon a verdict of any kind, that the court was put to great expense, and that while, of course, there should not be any forced verdict, it was right and proper that the jury should take as much time as necessary to consider every angle of the evidence which required several days to produce in open court. He explained that the jurors would not be required to sit in any other cases during the term, but that in view of the importance of the case and the mass of evidence before the jury, he believed they ought to ponder a while more before being discharged. The court offered to give any advice on law points but said he would not offer any opinion as to the facts, and said the court had no opinion as to the facts.

The court prepared to take up other cases on the calendar—chiefly civil cases. Two cases which were for trial Saturday were settled out of court. They were that of the San Darbarian against the Northern Pacific railroad and P. W. Chubb against Alexander Schutt.

PROBE DEATH OF A FORMER LOCAL WORKER

St. Paul Police Believe Vartan

Bedozian, Section Worker, Was Murdered

BODY FOUND FROZEN

Discovered Along Northern Pacific Tracks Near Jamestown in January

Police and private detectives of St. Paul are investigating the death of Vartan Bedozian, former Bismarck man, whose body was found along the tracks of the Northern Pacific Railway near Jamestown on January 7 last.

Bedozian, it has been developed in the investigation, drew $1,900 from the First National Bank in Bismarck a few days before he left Bismarck for St. Paul. Local officials of the bank confirmed the fact that Bedozian had an account there and closed it when he left the city, it being understood he was going to St. Paul on business, but did not disclose the amount.

Bedozian was a section worker on the Northern Pacific, according to Chief of Police Martinson, working between Bismarck and Jamestown and living with a cousin in a section workers' house on the south side. He was about 36 years old and unmarried.

St. Paul police believe that Bedozian was killed in St. Paul and his body transported to Jamestown to cover up the trail of the slayer. Dispatches say they are investigating reports of several quarrels he is said to have had before his disappearance.

The money he withdrew from the Bismarck bank was deposited in a bank in St. Paul, and police there believe the assassins were under the impression he was carrying it with him when he was attacked. Although the body was found on January 7 it was not identified until February 16.

Bedozian was proprietor of a rooming house in St. Paul.

Filing of Petitions for Entrance Into City Race

Ends on Wednesday

Four candidates were in the field today for city commissioner as the time for filing of petitions for the election, April 3, neared. Petitions must be filed not later than Wednesday night of this week. There will be two registration days before the election.

Candidates for city commissioner—two places to be filled—include J. P. French and John A. Larson, whose terms expire, A. C. Hinckley and F. W. Murphy. It is possible there will be no other candidates before the time for filing petitions ends.

No outstanding issues have as yet been put forward. The newest one thus far is that the two incumbents state in their platform that they favor municipal ownership of all public utilities, which are the electric light plant, water works and the gas plant.

A. C. Hinckley said that "my platform simply is better streets and lower taxes." He said that if he went on the commission he would expect to be given charge of the streets, a place he occupied before on the commission, and added that "everyone knows how the streets were taken care of when I was on the commission."

F. W. Murphy said today that he has consented to petitions being circulated for the office of city commissioner after some consideration of requests made, and that having decided to permit circulation of petitions he was out to do the best he could to be elected.

"I believe generally in reducing taxes is possible," he said, "in obtaining some adequate water works, and that the city's business ought to be run just the same as any other business concern."

Mr. Murphy has been a resident of the city since 1905, and is owner of the Rose apartments.

Mr. Larson had not prepared a statement on his candidacy today.

Candidates in the field for police magistrate include W. C. Cashman, incumbent, and Justice W. S. Casselman. Anton Beer, candidate at the last election, said he would not be a candidate. Nick Peters is a candidate for city justice of the peace.

JURY DISCHARGED.
The jury in district court in the Kasimir Schneider murder case was discharged about 2:45 o'clock this afternoon. The jury stood at the finish, it was understood, 11 to 1 for conviction.

One juror was today preventing agreement among the 12 men holding the Kasimir Schneider murder case. This report was made to District Judge Janonius this morning, after the jury had been out from five o'clock Friday afternoon, and the jury was to deliberate a few more hours before its final report was accepted.

The jury stood 11 to 1 for conviction almost from the start, it is understood.

When Judge Janonius called the jury in at 9:30 o'clock this morning, Foreman Davis reported the situation to the court, but did not say whether the jury was in majority for conviction or acquittal. He reported that there did not appear to be any chance of an agreement. He did say, however, that there were a few points the minority member had debated over, and was not quite clear on. Foreman Davis said the discussion throughout had been free from anger.

Emphasizes Importance
Judge Janonius told the jury that they had been very patient and had worked hard. He explained that the case had required several days for trial, that the defendant was entitled to be relieved from strain if the jury could agree upon a verdict of any kind, that the county was at great expense, and that while, of course, there should not any forced verdict, it was right and proper that the jury should take as much time as necessary to consider every angle of the evidence which required several days to produce in open court. He explained that the jurors would not be required to sit in any other cases during the term, but that in view of the importance of the case and the mass of evidence before the jury, he believed they ought to ponder a while more before being discharged. The court offered to give any advice on law points but said he would not offer any opinion as to the facts, and said the court had no opinion as to the facts.

The court prepared to take up other cases on the calendar chiefly civil cases. Two cases which were for trial Saturday were settled out of court. They were that of the Sam Darbarian against the Northern Pacific railroad and P. W. Chubb against Alexander Schutt.

Next Congress

Henry T. Murphy will be named acting postmaster at Bismarck within the next day or two, according to information reaching the Tribune today from Washington sources. The information was regarded as authentic, but was not confirmed in Bismarck.

The appointment, it is understood, will be made by the President. Being a temporary appointment, confirmation by the next Congress will be necessary.

Several days ago, it was announced that Mr. Murphy, Oliver Lundquist and C. W. McGraw were named on the eligible list, after the withdrawal of H. P. Goodard from the list.

Mr. Murphy, who is the head of the H. T. Murphy Insurance company, is well known in Bismarck. He is exalted ruler of the Elks lodge, member of the Rotary club, Knights of Columbus and prominent in other organizations. Mr. Murphy served in the Spanish-American war, being in the Philippine service for a year and also in the World War, being a captain.

Mr. Murphy would succeed Frank Reed, postmaster for the last eight years. Appointments as postmaster are made for a four-year period. The salary of the Bismarck postmaster is $3,700, the salary varying according to the amount of receipts.

A Bismarck attorney received a letter from Congressman Geo. M. Young in which he said that he had decided to support Mr. Murphy for the position of "acting postmaster," taken to mean for a recess appointment subject to confirmation of the U. S. Senate when it meets again.

St. Paul Police Believe Vartan Bedomian, Section Worker, Was Murdered

Police and private detectives of St. Paul are investigating the death of Vartan Bedomian, former Bismarck man, whose body was found along the tracks of the Northern Pacific Railway near Jamestown on January 7 last.

Bedomian, it has been developed in the investigation, drew $1,900 from the First National Bank in Bismarck a few days before he left Bismarck for St. Paul. Local officials of the bank confirmed the fact that Bedomian had an account there and closed it when he left the city, it being understood he was going to St. Paul on business, but did not disclose the amount.

Bedomian was a section worker on the Northern Pacific, according to Chief of Police Martinson, working between Bismarck and Jamestown and living with a cousin in a section workers' house on the south side. He was about 36 years old and unmarried.

St. Paul police believe that Bedomian was killed in St. Paul and his body transported to Jamestown to cover up the trail of the slayers, dispatches say. They are investigating reports of several quarrels he is said to have had before his disappearance.

The money he withdrew from the Bismarck bank was deposited in a bank in St. Paul, and police there believe the assassins were under the impression he was carrying it with him when he was attacked.

Although the body was found on January 7 it was not identified until February 16.

Bedomian was proprietor of a rooming house in St. Paul.

Two or more solicitors had been chosen for each precinct in the county.

The costs of litigation and prosecution of the case in the Florida courts is now estimated at from $5,000 to $10,000, according to the Cavalier County Republican.

There will be not only the costs of litigation and of transporting witnesses from various parts of the United States but also of publicity in putting the case before the people of Florida, it is pointed out.

One of the aims is to obtain, repeal of the law permitting leasing of county prisoners to private companies in addition to securing damages and criminal conviction of the persons alleged to be responsible for Tabert's death in the Putnam Lumber company stockade, near Clara, Fla.

TURKS REPLY ON LAUSANNE DISCUSSIONS

Unable to Agree With Economic Clauses of Proposed Treaty

HANDED TO ALLIES

Note Sent by Special Courier to Allied Government
By Envoy

Constantinople, March 10.—Although Turkey's answer to proposals submitted to her at Lausanne asked no important modification clauses of the treaty the Angora government finds difficulty in the economic section and in the paragraph covering the troublesome capitulations questions. The note, now in the hands of the British, French and Italian high commissioners, insists that Turkish subjects in allied countries go accorded the same right that allies seek for their nationals in Turkey. It also proposes further discussion of those economic clauses upon which there is as yet no agreement, suggesting resumption of the conversations at Constantinople or some other European city.

The Angora note, which is 115 pages in length, proposes slight changes in Turkey's boundaries as outlined in the treaties. It accepts in full the section covering prisoners of war and with minor changes the part dealing with communications.

The note asks that provisions be made for paying the interest on the Turkish debt in paper money.

The allied high commissioners have dispatched to their respective governments special couriers carrying the text of the proposals.

Hidden Values They Keep Essex Young

Essex wins admiration from the first.

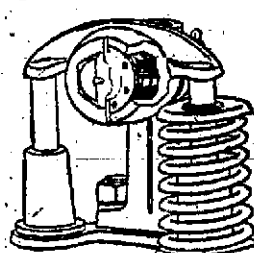

But the greatest Essex enthusiasts are those who have driven their cars 50,000 miles or more. They have discovered the hidden values.

Design and construction details not observable in the new car assert their importance as use increases. Essex values extend to the minute details. The finest bearings made are used throughout. They are to an automobile what jewels are to a watch. Parts that wear are inexpensively replaced.

In chassis and body, Essex throughout possesses qualities essential to long hard service. That means economical service, always.

Essex is the only American car with roller bearings in the drive mechanism. This construction overcomes wear and frictional loss at one of the most important points. Prevents noise and saves a big item of replacement expense. All other cars use plain bearings for this vital function. Just another of the hidden values that account for the everlasting goodness of Essex cars.

DO YOU KNOW WHY THE GEAR-SHIFT IS DIFFERENT?

The design of Dodge Brothers gear-shift takes into consideration the natural inclinations of the driver.

To start, you throw the lever forward. To reverse, you pull the lever backward. And when the car is running in high gear—which is about ninety per cent of the time—the lever is in a forward position, out of the way, where it does not interfere with passengers, robes, or luggage.

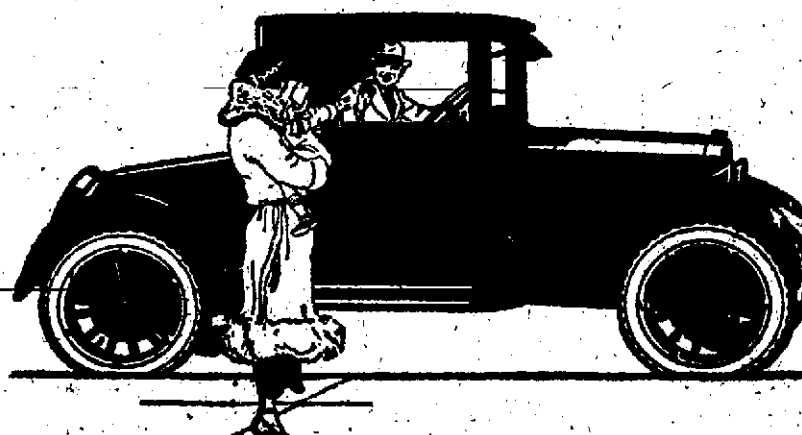

Moreover, the transmission, developed and patented by Dodge Brothers, is so designed that the countershaft—used in intermediate speeds and in reverse—is disconnected when the car is in high. There are no gears in mesh. Power is transmitted directly from clutch to rear axle.

This exclusive feature prevents the loss of power through friction, reduces gear-box noises and eliminates a vast amount of wear.

That is why the gear-shift of Dodge Brothers Motor Car is different.

The price of the Business Coupe is $1155.00 delivered in Bismarck.

OSCAR WILL'S
NAME HONORED
AT STATE A. C.

One of Six Put in Hall of Fame for Work for Agriculture in State

The Saddle and Stirrup club of the agricultural college has established a "hall of fame," for the purpose of honoring noted agriculturists of North Dakota. This hall of fame will consist of an Honor Portrait Gallery, located in the new agricultural college, in which shall hang portraits of the men who have done the most for the development of agriculture.

The number of portraits hung each year will be limited, so that only those men who have made the greatest accomplishments along their particular lines of agriculture shall be eligible for this honor. As the club is primarily an animal husbandry organization, preference will be given to men who have spent the greater part of their life in improving the livestock of the state. Men who have made notable accomplishments along other lines, however, will not be excluded from the gallery.

Six men have been voted into the hall of fame. They are: J. B. Power of Leonard, J. H. Board of Grand Forks, and Oscar Will of Bismarck, all of whom have died, and John Christensen of New Salem, Sam Hatcher of Valley City and Frank Sanford of Rogers, who still are active in their chosen line of work.

Concerning Mr. Will's accomplishment the club says:

Oscar Will was an agronomist who accomplished much along the line of clovering grains that were well suited to this state. To him we are indebted for the North Dakota White Plant and the Genu varieties of corn that are so widely grown in this state. These varieties of corn were developed from the original Indian corn that he obtained from the Indians that first inhabited our state. His son, George Will of Bismarck is now carrying on the work started by his father.

John Christensen of New Salem is given a place for his work in developing the New Salem Holstein Dairy outfit.

AGGIES TAKE CHAMPIONSHIP

Beat University Second Time
in Two Days at Basketball

Fargo, N. D., Mar. 12.—The North Dakota Agricultural college quart Saturday night won its first state basketball championship in seven years when it defeated the University of North Dakota 28 to 27, in a contest that will stand out in the sport annals of the two institutions for generations. It was won, lost, and won again in the last 45 seconds of a battle that raged on practically even terms through the 40 minutes of play.

The hero of the hour on the Aggie campus was Duncan, forward on the yellow and green quint. With 15 seconds left to play he dropped a field basket through from the middle of the floor and the gun brought the contest to a close while the Flickers were battling under their own basket in possession of the ball. They had taken two tries and missed both when the timer called it off.

The score stood 25 to 26 with the Aggies leading, there was less than a minute left to go when Busdicker turned loose a long one that fell through the basket without touching the rim. The Flickers had the contest apparently won, but the Aggie supporters were screaming for one more goal. Only 15 seconds remained when Duncan received a pass and standing even farther down the floor than Busdicker did, he sent the ball on its way toward his own goal with an inward prayer to the goddess of luck. Evidently his petition was heard, for it followed a course that led just through the loop and as the game ended the Aggie students turned loose a pandemonium that made any previous cheering during the series seem like the whispering of a tropic cypher. They did not stop to remove the chairs from their way. They tramped over them, threw things at each other and the down-town people who wanted to get out had to wait until the storm subsided.

The game was by far the best of the series of four played between the two teams. Critics believed that the scoring would be less than it was Friday because of desperate guarding, but both teams changed tactics and shot at every opportunity. The result was a contest of the strong nerved.

MANDAN NEWS

500-Foot Syndicate
Sewage Caves In

Due to the recent flooding of Mandan by the rise of the Heart river 500 feet of sewage in the Syndicate has caved in north of the Syndicate sewer pumping station.

Quicksand washed out from the sewer pipe allowing it to separate and drop while many wagon loads of sewage have been washed into the pipes, the well of the pumping station, and the outlet. The cave-in is similar to one which occurred last year at another point on the same sewer line.

City Commissioner Nels H. Romer, head of the water work division of the city, and Supt. Fred Thorpe of the water works announced that a force of men would be placed at work Monday, opening up the sewer which serves the southwest section of the city.

Due to the ice from the recent flood sheated over the entire surface of the district, it was not until Saturday afternoon that the source of the trouble which had rendered the Syndicate sewer useless was discovered.

Will Sentence
Thompson Today

Tom Thompson who was pronounced guilty of grand larceny in district court before Judge F. T. Lemke will receive his sentence at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Thompson was placed on trial here on a charge of venue from Mercer county being charged with stealing a Ford coupe from Golden Valley last August. The car, which was the property of Quanrud, Reichold and Brink of Bismarck was later found in Minot. Thompson and Gandy were arrested there.

State's Attorney David Schwartz of Mercer county moved to dismiss the charges against Gandy admitting that the circumstances on which Thompson were not conclusive enough to warrant trial of Gandy's case.

Following the dismissal of the Gandy case Saturday morning the selection of a jury to try Wm. Koller, charged with a statutory offense was then completed and appeared for opening of the trial at 2 o'clock today.

COMMERCIAL CLUB BANQUET.

A large crowd is expected to attend the banquet of the Mandan Commercial club at the Lewis & Clark hotel this evening at 6:30 o'clock.

Mrs. B. S. Niekerson, general chairman of the work last year, will attend the meeting in an advisory capacity. Heads of the operating organizations are Mrs. Frank McGillo, F. H. Waldo, Anna Stark and Hal Parsons.

Rev. and Mrs. Madsen of Center, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pierson of the city were guests of Miss Clara Mueller, superintendent of the Deaconess hospital at a dinner party Friday evening.

Mrs. Louis Larson left Friday for St. Paul, Minn., where she will spend some time with her husband who is a patient in the Northern Pacific hospital. Dr. Elde, chief surgeon of the N. P. institution, stated that Engineer Larson is a victim of a form of brain fever and is not suffering sickness as had previously been reported.

ORDER SCHOOL
BIDS REVISED

Dickinson, N. D., Mar. 12.—All bids covering construction work plumbing and heating and electric wiring and fixtures contracts submitted to the board of education for the proposed new grade school building in South Dickinson were rejected at a meeting of the board. The reason for the action of the board was that the total of the bids ranged from $8,000 to $12,900 higher than the amount at the disposal of the board to be used in erecting the building.

The board will now call in its architects, Sannon, Boyd and Shannon of Devils Lake, and have them eliminate several of the more elaborate features of the plans and specifications in order that the cost of the proposed building may be kept around the $35,000 mark. As soon as the revised plans have been approved the board will again call for bids.

LIVESTOCK AID
COUNTY AGENT
TASK OF YEAR

One of Most Important Works
Carried on, Says State
Leader

Fargo, N. D., Mar. 12.—Placing the livestock industry of North Dakota on a more profitable basis through the introduction of feed crops, pure bred sires, and higher grade stock, has been one of the important projects carried on during the past year, according to the annual report of John W. Haw, state county agent leader.

County extension agents of the state helped farmers select 7,831 bushels of seed corn last spring, and 6,688 bushels were tested for germination before planting. Alfalfa was introduced on 578 farms with a total acreage of 6,049 during the year. One of the most important projects was the introduction of sweet clover. A total of 2,509 farmers started growing this valuable hay, pasture and green manuring crop during the year, and 1,202,220 pounds of seed were distributed through the county agents.

County agents acted as a connecting link between farmers who had pure seed for sale and those who wanted to purchase the same. The annual report shows that 55,111 bushels of seed was secured for 1,372 farmers, and 145,364 bushels of seed was sold for 458 farmers.

A total of 675 purebred sires were obtained for farmers of the state, and 870 high grade and registered females. Five bull associations and eight livestock breeders' associations were organized during the year. A series of feeding schools was held at which instruction was given in the preparation of balanced rations using home-grown products, 666 farmers receiving instructions at these schools.

Live cow testing organizations were formed during the year. 1,438 dairy cows were tested for their milk production, and of this number 224 were discarded when it was found that they were not producing enough butter fat to pay for their keep.

TAX PAYMENTS
ARE HELD GOOD
BY OFFICIALS

Early Receipts From 1922
Payments Said Ex-
ceptional

While few remittances of 1922 taxes have been received by state officials from county treasurers, reports through other agencies indicate that the percentage of taxes paid up to penalties were put on March 1 in many western counties is extremely gratifying to local officials.

A statement of State Treasurer John Steen, of payments for 1919, 1920 and 1921, shows a relatively small percentage of delinquency still existing for those years. Payments for 1919 are 97.6 percent, and the state board of equalization as a general rule when it makes levies figures that not more than 95 percent of the taxes levied ever will be paid. The percentage for 1921, almost 90 percent, also is regarded as good.

The 1922 taxes are not expected to be remitted by county treasurers before the latter part of this month.

The treasurer's statement of state tax collected up to March 1, 1923, for the years 1919, 1920, 1921 and 1922 follows:

1919 Total State Levy (all purposes)	$3,673,362.22
Total Collections	3,580,526.09
Percentage Collected	.976%
1920 Total State Levy (all purposes)	$2,852,582.78
Total Collections	2,602,916.42
Percentage Collected	.912%

peace and quiet they all want so eagerly.

Every day they read in the papers the same tragic list of events: a fine country house has been burned, a farmer has lost his crops by the torch, a shopkeeper has been shot while resisting armed bands, a railway train out of Cork has been destroyed by irregulars.

There is probably not a person in the Free State who hasn't had a kinsman affected by this kind of warfare.

But pull long faces? Not the Irish! Everybody is trying to "carry on" as usual. But there is a slowing down everywhere.

A good indication of general economic conditions is the report of the Dublin United Tramway Company. For the year just ended it showed a deficit. Bad business, unemployment, and the fighting of last June account for this.

STING FARMERS ON POULTRY

A number of farmers from the Underwood vicinity, who shipped dressed poultry direct to some eastern commission houses for Thanksgiving and Christmas trade were in Bismarck Saturday consulting various persons upon possible legal action.

According to their statement, deduction of from 25 to 40 percent in weight was made by the purchasing commission houses without any explanation being given. This is far beyond the natural shrinkage in shipping, they assert.

It is declared by some that good prices were paid by the same houses during the 1921 season and numerous farmers disregarded local buyers this year to ship direct to Chicago, but now are sorry that they did so.

HARDING ENDORSES
GARDEN WEEK

Washington, March 12.—A National Garden Week Campaign will be conducted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, April 22 to 25. President Harding has given the project his endorsement in a letter to Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, president of the federation as follows:

"My dear Mrs. Winter:

"I am glad to assure you of my hearty endorsement of the program of the General Federation of Women's Clubs for a National Garden Week this spring. The benefits both to individuals who take part and to the community as a whole are so obvious that they seem hardly to require enumeration.

Mrs. Winter says of the purpose of Garden Week:

"Perhaps nothing could help to stabilize our minds and spirits in this very tumultuous time so much as a profound and intimate realization of the steadiness of the universe in which we live—its law, its orderliness, its magnificent long purposes and recurrences. The Garden Movement means a great deal more than getting a little plot of land where the child or the grown-up can raise a few sweet peas or radishes. It means that serene contact with the vitality and reliability and serenity of nature, of purpose and fulfillment, of human life as related to forces in-initely greater than itself. That's the reason we club women are backing Garden Week. We believe in the kind of activity that links itself with order purpose—that sees the day as a part of eternity."

OSCAR WILL'S NAME HONORED AT STATE A. C.

One of Six Put in Hall of Fame for Work for Agriculture in State

The Saddle and Sirolo club of the agricultural college has established a "hall of fame" for the purpose of honoring noted agriculturists of North Dakota. This hall of fame will consist of an Honor Portrait Gallery, located in the new agricultural college, in which shall hang portraits of the men who have done the most for the development of agriculture.

The number of portraits hung each year will be limited, so that only those men who have made the greatest accomplishments along their particular lines of endeavor shall be eligible for this honor. As the club is primarily an animal husbandry organization preference will be given to men who have spent the greater part of their life in improving the livestock of the state. Men who have made notable accomplishments along other lines, however, will not be excluded from the gallery.

Six men have been voted into the hall of fame. They are: J. B. Power of Leonard, J. H. Board of Grand Forks, and Oscar Will of Bismarck, all of whom have died, and John Christenson of New Salem, Sam Fletcher of Valley City and Frank Sanford of Rogers, who still are active in their chosen line of work.

Concerning Mr. Will's accomplishment the club says:

"Oscar Will was an agronomist, who accomplished much along the line of developing grains that were well suited to this state. To him we are indebted for the North Dakota White Flint and the Gehu varieties of corn that are so widely grown in this state. These varieties of corn were developed from the original Indian corn that he obtained from the Indians that first inhabited our state. His son, George Will of Bismarck is now carrying on the work started by his father.

John Christenson of New Salem is given a place for his work in developing the New Salem Holstein Dairy circuit.

AGGIES TAKE CHAMPIONSHIP

Beat University Second Time
in Two Days at Basketball

Fargo, N. D., Mar. 12.—The North Dakota Agricultural college quit Saturday night won its first state basketball championship in seven years when it defeated the University of North Dakota 28 to 27, in a contest that will stand out in the sport annals of the two institutions for generations. It was won, lost, and won again in the last 45 seconds of a battle that raged on practically even terms through the 40 minutes of play.

The hero of the hour on the Aggie campus was Duncan, forward on the yellow and green quint. With 15 seconds left to play he dropped a field basket through from the middle of the floor and the gun brought the contest to a close while the Flickertails were battling under their own basket in possession of the ball. They had taken two tries and missed both when the timer called it off.

The score stood 25 to 26 with the Aggies leading, there was less than a minute left to go when Busdicker turned loose a long one that fell through the basket without touching the rim. The Flickertails had the contest apparently won, but the Aggie supporters were screaming for one more goal. Only 15 seconds remained when Duncan received a pass and standing even farther down the floor than Busdicker did, he sent the ball on its way toward his own goal with an inward prayer to the goddess of luck. Evidently his petition was heard, for it followed a course that led it through the loop and as the game ended the Aggie students turned loose a pandemonium that made any previous cheering during the series seem like the whisperings of a tropic cypher. They did not stop to remove the chairs from their way. They tramped over them, threw things at each other and the down-town people who wanted to get out had to wait until the storm subsided.

The game was by far the best of the series of four played between the two teams. Critics believed that the scoring would be less than it was Friday because of desperate guarding, but both teams changed tactics and shot at every opportunity. The result was a contest of the strong nerved.

MANDAN NEWS

500-Foot Syndicate Sewage Caves In

Due to the recent flooding of Mandan by the rise of the Heart river 500 feet of sewage in the Syndicate has caved in north of the Syndicate sewer pumping station.

Quicksand washed out from the sewer pipe allowing it to separate and drop while many wagon loads of sand have been washed into the pipes, the well of the pumping station, and the outlet. The cave-in is similar to one which occurred last year at another point on the same sewer line.

City Commissioner Nels H. Rorer, head of the water work division of the city, and Supt. Fred Tharpe of the water works announced that a force of men would be placed at work early, opening up the sewer which serves the southwest section of the city.

Due to the ice from the recent flood sheated over the entire surface of the district, it was not until Saturday afternoon that the source of the trouble which had rendered the Syndicate sewer useless was discovered.

Will Sentence
Thompson Today

Tom Thompson who was pronounced guilty of grand larceny in district court before Judge F. T. Lemke will receive his sentence at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Thompson was placed on trial here on a charge of venue from Mercer county being charged with stealing a Ford coupe from Golden Valley last August. The car which was the property of Quanrud, Reibold and Brink of Bismarck was later found in Minot. Thompson and Gandy were arrested there.

State's Attorney David Schwartz of Mercer county moved to dismiss the charges against Gandy admitting that the circumstances on which Thompson were not conclusive enough to warrant trial of Gandy's case.

Following the dismissal of the Gandy case Saturday morning the selection of a jury to try Wm. Koller, charged with a statutory offense was then completed and appeared for opening of the trial at 2 o'clock today.

COMMERCIAL CLUB BANQUET.

A large crowd is expected to attend the banquet of the Mandan Commercial club at the Lewis & Clark hotel this evening at 6:30 o'clock.

This annual event will include a short program and business meeting immediately after the banquet. There will be no chance to members, the expense being borne by the club.

FORMULATE WELFARE PLANS.

An executive committee for Child Welfare week will be organized at a meeting of representatives of the four federated clubs and the Parent-Teachers association to the Commercial club this afternoon. Mrs. B. S. Nickerson, general chairman of the work last year, will attend the meeting in an advisory capacity. Heads of the co-operating organizations are Mmes. Frank McGillic, F. H. Waldo, Anna Stark and Hal Parsons.

Rev. and Mrs. Madsen of Center, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pierson of the city were guests of Miss Clara Mueller, superintendent of the Deaconess hospital at a dinner party Friday evening.

Mrs. Louis Larson left Friday for St. Paul, Minn., where she will spend some time with her husband who is a patient in the Northern Pacific hospital. Dr. Eide, chief surgeon of the N. P. institution, stated that Engineer Larson is a victim of a form of brain fever and is not suffering sickness as had previously been reported.

A good sized audience attended the recital given Friday evening at the assembly room under the auspices of the junior class when Miss Helen Burns, reader, gave a program of well selected numbers. Miss Helen Htlmes, formerly musical instructor in the local schools also appear upon the program.

ORDER SCHOOL
BIDS REVISED

Dickinson, N. D., Mar. 12.—All bids covering construction work plumbing and heating contracts submitted to the board of education for the proposed new grade school building in South Dickinson were rejected at a meeting of the board.

The reason for the action of the board was that the total of the bids ranged from $8,000 to $12,000 higher than the amount at the disposal of the board to be used in erecting the building.

The board will now call in its architects, Sannon, Boyd and Shannon of Devils Lake, and have them eliminate several of the more elaborate features of the plans and specifications in order that the cost of the proposed building may be kept around the $35,000 mark. As soon as the revised plans have been approved the board will again call for bids.

LIVESTOCK AID COUNTY AGENT TASK OF YEAR

One of Most Important Works
Carried on, Says State
Leader

Fargo, N. D., Mar. 12.—Placing the livestock industry of North Dakota on a more profitable basis through the introduction of feed crops, pure bred sires, and higher grade stock, has been one of the important projects carried on during the past year, according to the annual report of John W. Haw, state county agent leader.

County extension agents of the state helped farmers select 7,831 bushels of seed corn last spring, and 6,683 bushels were tested for germination before planting. Alfalfa was introduced on 573 farms with a total acreage of 6,049 during the year. One of the most important projects was the introduction of sweet clover. A total of 2,509 farmers started growing this valuable hay, pasture and green manuring crop during the year, and 1,202,220 pounds of seed were distributed through the county agents.

County agents acted as a connecting link between farmers who had pure seed for sale and those who wanted to purchase the same. The annual report shows that 55,114 bushels of seed was secured for 1,372 farmers, and 145,364 bushels of seed was sold for 458 farmers.

A total of 675 purebred sires were obtained for farmers of the state, and 870 high grade and registered females. Five bull associations and eight livestock breeders' associations were organized during the year. A series of feeding schools was held in the preparation of balanced rations using home-grown products, 666 farmers receiving instructions at these schools.

Five cow testing organizations were formed during the year, 1,458 dairy cows were tested for their milk production, and of this number 224 were discarded when it was found that they were not producing enough butter fat to pay for their keep.

TAX PAYMENTS ARE HELD GOOD BY OFFICIALS

Early Receipts From 1922
Payments Said Ex-
ceptional

While few remittances of 1922 taxes have been received by state officials from county treasurers, reports through other agencies indicate that the percentage of taxes paid up to penalties were put on March 1 in many western counties is extremely gratifying to local officials.

A statement of State Treasurer John Steen, of payments for 1919, 1920 and 1921, shows a relatively small percentage of delinquency still existing for those years. Payments for 1919 are 97.6 percent, and the state board of equalization as a general rule when it makes levies figures that not more than 95 percent of the taxes levied ever will be paid. The percentage for 1921, almost 90 percent, also is regarded as good.

The 1922 taxes are not expected to be remitted by county treasurers before the latter part of this month.

The treasurer's statement of state tax collected up to March 1, 1923, for the years 1919, 1920, 1921 and 1922 follows:

1919 Total State Levy (all purposes) $3,673,362.22

Total Collections 3,580,526.09

Percentage Collected 97.6%

1920 Total State Levy (all purposes) $2,852,582.78

Total Collections 2,602,918.42

Percentage Collected 91.2%

1921 Total State Levy (all purposes) $4,655,706.10

Total Collections 4,184,141.50

Percentage Collected 89.8%

1922 Total State Levy (all purposes) $4,762,905.13

Total Collections 113,864.54

Percentage Collected 2.3%

AUDITOR RESIGNS.

Carson, N. D., Mar. 12.—The county commissioners met in session and acted upon the resignation of E. A. Holritz as county auditor. They appointed John Sept, who has been deputy auditor during Mr. Holritz's administration. The appointment

It is declared by some that good prices were paid by the same houses during the 1921 season and numerous farmers disgruntled local buyers this year to ship direct to Chicago, but now are sorry that they did so.

HARDING ENDORSES GARDEN WEEK

Washington, March 12.—A National Garden Week Campaign will be conducted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, April 22 to 28. President Harding has given the project his endorsement in a letter to Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, president of the federation as follows:

"My dear Mrs. Winter: I am glad to assure you of my hearty endorsement of the program of the General Federation of Women's Clubs for a National Garden Week this spring. The benefits both to individuals who take part and to the community as a whole are so obvious that they seem hardly to require enumeration.

"Most sincerely yours, Warren G. Harding."

Mrs. Winter says of the purpose of Garden Week:

"Perhaps nothing could help to stabilize our minds and spirits in this very tumultuous time so much as a profound and intimate realization of the steadiness of the universe in which we live—its law, its orderliness, its magnificent long purposes and recurrences. The Garden Movement means a great deal more than getting a little plot of land where the child or the grown-up can raise a few sweet peas or radishes. It means that serene contact with the vitality and reliability and serenity of nature, of purpose and fulfillment, of human life as related to forces infinitely greater than itself. That's the reason we club women are backing Garden Week. We believe in the kind of activity that links itself with order purpose—that sees the day as a part of eternity."

Announcement

I desire to announce my candidacy for the office of Police Magistrate, subject to the will of the voters in the election on April 3. My motto is "A Square Deal to All." Will appreciate your support.

MANY BRIDGES DESTROYED IN HIGH WATERS

Five Bordering on Sioux County Are Carried Out in Breakup of Ice

HEATS RIDING BRONCS

Many bridges were destroyed and several people narrowly escaped with their lives in the breakup of the Cedar and Cannon Ball rivers, bordering Sioux County. The Fort Yates Pioneer says:

Five bridges bordering Sioux county were demolished last week by the break up of the Cedar and Cannon Ball rivers. They are the Cannon Ball bridge at Shields, the Swastika bridge, the Watauga-Paradise bridge, the Howe bridge and the Colville bridge. In the extreme west end of the county several families were temporarily forced to leave their homes by the flood waters of the Cedar. The disastrous break up of these rivers was due to the extremely warm weather of last week.

Shields Bridge Total Loss
The bridge at Shields, a combination steel and wooden bridge, broke apart the night of the first of March, the larger part swinging around until it rested against the bank. The bridge is badly wrecked and it is doubtful whether any of it can be salvaged. The big bridge is said to have weighed like a serpent under the force of the river before breaking asunder. This bridge was built in 1918 at a cost of about $8,000. It will cost considerably more than that now to replace it.

Later reports indicate that all of the Shields bridge has been washed away, leaving only the piers standing.

Swastika gives the following interesting account of the smash-up of the other two bridges:

"The Cedar river broke up Wednesday and Thursday of last week and the ice carried destruction in its path.

The Watauga-Paradise and Swastika bridges were both taken out. The Swastika bridge is a mass of twisted steel near where it fell, while the Watauga-Paradise bridge came down to thin two miles of where the Swastika bridge stood.

Breaking Bridges

"John" White and Frank LaBell coming down the river Friday morning, watched their chance and jumped onto it and rode it to a point about three miles down stream from where they got onto it.

"The boys tell some hair-raising stories as to how the bridge acted when big cakes of ice struck it, as the river was full of floating ice at the time. Unless the bridge breaks loose from where the boys landed it, it is now about eight miles below as the crew flies or 15 miles as the river runs.

Fences and All Go
"Hundreds of rods of fences were torn out and all small trees and bushes were 'rode' flat. The river Friday was from 100 to 600 or 700 feet wide in places. We doubt if the Cedar was ever any higher than at this break-up."

The Pioneer's correspondent from the west end tells of two more bridges being swept away by the Cedar and of families being driven from their homes. The interesting account in the "Chronicles of the West" is as follows:

"Old settlers were greatly surprised Thursday night when the Cedar river overflowed its banks and spread over the country. Colville and Howe bridges were washed out, the former going out about 6 in the evening and the latter at 8.

"Several families were driven from their homes. Two ones who had to leave their homes in this community were Mrs. Maud Locke, Cas. Peterson, Wm. Colville, Chas. Moll and Adolph Moll. If the river had risen a few feet more a great leave their homes. This is the highest the Cedar has ever been, at least in late years."

Water is said to be the highest ever known.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

WHAT THEIR ACTION SHOWS

The additional vetoes made by the Governor of institutional appropriations are reported to have been made with consent and in some cases on recommendation of the heads of the institutions. The action of the institutional heads who did join in an effort to reduce the state's expenses appears to be praiseworthy. But it may also indicate either that they were willing to make sacrifices, or that the assertions of the North Dakota Taxpayers Association and others that tax money is spent for naught in many institutions is justified. Few of the appropriations, it is understood, were higher than the budget, and practically none higher than was recommended by institutional heads before the legislature. If it was necessary for the institutional heads to await the executive mandate before agreeing that appropriations were higher than necessary their action is not praiseworthy but is a confession.

It must be admitted, that the method of making appropriations for running the state government is unsatisfactory. Without adequate information and spurred by a suddenly developed sentiment, legislatures often will cut deeper than they should, and often will leave items lower than is justified. An example may be seen in the appropriations for the state railroad commission. Here is a body that is given supervision of one hundred million dollars worth of property in North Dakota, that has power to raise or lower rates in public utilities amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. Utility rates went upward during the war and post-war period. A period of readjustment now is in progress all over the nation and utility rates ought to be adjusted to meet the changed conditions. Yet the legislature gave the railroad commission inadequate finances and facilities to make a proper readjustment. The economy in this instance may have been "penny wise and pound foolish."

It is difficult to suggest any better method than giving the people's representatives the final decision in the matter of appropriations, with the executive holding veto power. Perhaps the situation may be accepted as one of the difficulties of putting business methods in government. Except for those legislators who are willing to trade the state's money to get some for their own constituency, the members of the legislature generally are imbued with the purpose of serving the state best in making appropriations.

If heads of many state institutions have found it possible, when pressed by the chief executive, to dispense with appropriation items without crippling their institutions, perhaps the county, city, township and school authorities in every part of the state may be able to do the same, and in so doing to render a real service to the state in placing it again on the lowest level of taxation possible.

In the manner of pruning unnecessary items, Governor Nestos has performed an able service. Unfortunately some appropriations were so lumped as to be immune from executive veto.

A SORRY SPECTACLE

The adage that "where there's smoke there's fire" may or may not hold true in the charges and counter-charges made regarding the Cass county grand jury investigation into the affairs of the Scandinavian-American Bank. Perhaps the smoke is simply a smoke-screen. But the situation does call forcibly to mind that thousands of people in North Dakota in the last few years—on all sides of the political fence—have come to look upon public office as a means of executing political vengeance and upon the many courts as being actuated by political motives in many decisions. Such violation of public office, if it is proved, should be so reprehensible to all people that they will rise to smite any violator, regardless of politics, ability or position.

MUMMY

If you could unwind the long strips of cloth and papyrus from King Tut's mummy, you'd find a black and shriveled corpse more like a charred tar statue than the remains of a man.

The popular notion, about the marvels of ancient Egyptian embalming, is nine-tenths bunk. Any modern undertaker, using the best methods and fluids, can excel the embalmers of King Tut's time.

COMPETITOR

Do you remember, when the war ended, a wave of fear swept our country that Germany would corner the world's foreign trade?

Reduced to value in American dollars, our exports last year totaled about four times as much as Germany's.

This illustrates, that we live in an age of false alarms. Great crises threaten us, one after another. You have observed that they do not materialize. "Nerves" make us dread the chimeras.

"SMUT"

Police charge that thousands of copies of an obscene book called "Smut" have been sold to Chicago high school boys and girls. Discussing this, many grownups will shake their heads and comment that the rising generation certainly is going to pot.

The same grown-ups may recall reading Boccaccio and such booklets as "Only a Boy" when they were young. Strike an average and the youngsters are just about the same in one generation as another.

SUN

Grossman, young New York scientist, thinks he has found a way to "can sunlight"—store the sun's energy and keep it until needed, even at distant places. Whether he has it or not, it will come, just a matter of time.

Meantime, in coal and crops, we have a more perfect form of "canned sunlight" than the inventors ever will discover.

Grossman's claim calls attention to this: The chief motive of civilization at present is to find cheap power.

MIXED POLITICS

With fellows like L. L. Twitchell of Cass county boring from within the anti-league forces, and Lemke Baker and Church doing the same in the League camp, both forces seem ready for several protracted pet-together appeals.

Twitchell has alienated almost every newspaperman in the state by his attitude on laws affecting their business. When both the League and the anti-league newspaper associations jointly offered a bill to the Legislature which would reduce by several hundred per cent the excessive price which by some error was allowed for printing delinquent tax lists and when the same associations offered also an amendment providing for a reduction in the publication of school trustees' reports their fairness was not by a demand for a general reduction on all legal notices which would wipe out every cent of profit entirely. And Twitchell of the I. V. A. led the fight against the newspaper men. His idea seems to be to make the newspapers so poor that they will be more amenable to influence. None of the country newspapers with which legal notices mean no small income, has been accused of being unduly rich. No country editor buys a new pair of pants on account of any particular wear and tear on the seat part.

It would have been a calamity if Twitchell had been accepted as speaker of the house this session. Unless he gets eliminated from I. V. A. politics he'll make an Andy Gump out of F. G. Nelson and put the party on a latrine detail.

The rift in the melodious lute-tuned by the Leagues comes over the proposed recall of Nestos. The recent League convention seemed to be influenced in favor of the recall thru some of the League leaders headed by Lemke. Those who were not in favor of the recall were not of course in favor of Nestos, but they saw something larger for the League to do than engage in childish spite through a recall. Their feelings were fittingly stated in the words "Let 'em stew in their own juice," presuming in their own League way that this "juice" was something concocted by the I. V. A. administration which would burn, boil and dissolve all future evidence of IVA existence.

Proper proceeding for each party is to put both Lemke and Twitchell in old King Tut's tomb and seal it for another 3,000 years. —Killdeer Herald (Independent.)

GOVERNOR IS PEEVED

The governor of Florida is very much peeved because the legislature of North Dakota passed a resolution condemning the dogging to death of a North Dakota young man in one of the convict camps of that state. A young man from Cavalier county, who had been fined for vagrancy and sentenced to jail and was afterwards farmed out to a lumber camp contractor and then mistreated in that camp until he died. The Florida executive says that the resolution passed by the North Dakota legislature is giving his state some very undesirable advertising and he thinks our legislature went too far. The governor says that no state treats its convicts better than does Florida. We will say that if they treat them all the same way that the North Dakota young man was treated it is very effective treatment. The State of North Dakota is not blaming the Florida governor in the least but is not altogether responsible for what some of the officials of that state do, but as head of that state government he will be held strictly responsible for what actually happened in that camp, and until the authorities of Florida bring the guilty party or parties who are responsible for the heinous crime committed to the bar of justice and deals with them according to the enormity of the crime committed, the people of this state will pay no attention to the crocodile tears of the governor and his protestations that criminals are treated better in Florida than in any state in the union. Actions speak louder than words, and what we want is action and the guilty person or persons punished. North Dakota legislature is not passing resolutions unless it has very good grounds for so doing, we would advise the governor of the alligator state. —Valley City Times-Record.

BY JOSEPH S. FRELINGHUYSEN
U. S. Ex-Senator From New Jersey

I have used this story many times as an opening address when I have been preceded by one of these long-winded introductors. A criminal was about to be hanged for murder.

During almost all the day before and right up to the minute set for the execution, the minister had been trying to get the man to repent. But he was a hard-boiled murderer and wouldn't do it. He even grew impatient.

Just as the trap was about to be sprung, he turned to the sheriff and said: "Sheriff, I want a drink. You've been very square with me. And to the hangman he said: 'I ain't holdin' no grudge against you, either. You treated me fine and you gotta hang people to make a divan.'"

"But as for you," he turned to the minister, "I'll see you—later!"

And I watched the scene.

Madame smiled at us knowingly.

In effect it is he," she admitted. "Madame is the wife of an old client, an American gentleman who left this evening for London."

"A love-affair?" I queried under my breath.

Madame shrugged her shoulders. Her glance was eloquent.

"What can one do?" she murmured. "Only I hope that Monsieur will never desert me. He has a violent temper. Ah! The merciful heavens! It is Monsieur himself who returns! Now there has tragedy arrived indeed!"

Into the hotel, with his coat-tails flying behind him, came a man whom at first I did not recognize. I myself had stepped back out of sight, and I watched the scene.

TUT, TUT, TUT!

THE HONOR OF
M. LUTARD

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Vendetta begins between MICHAEL SAYERS, noted criminal, and

SIR NORMAN GREYES, once of Scotland Yard, when Sayers' beautiful housemaid, JANET, saves him from Sir Norman by shooting dead the officer sent to arrest him. Janet becomes Sayers' wife and accomplice. In the Leeds bank robbery, Michael (known to Greyes as "Stanfield") barely escapes and has to flee the country.

Sayers plots with another well-known criminal, Paul Gont, to ruin the political leader, Philippe Lutard. Gont sends for Janet to assist them. Sir Norman is hired by the government to protect Lutard. Janet calls on Lutard at night with a letter asking him to communicate with a friend who has important information. Lutard promises to follow Janet, then finds that the letter brought by her has disappeared.

HOW TO ON WITH STORY
SIR NORMAN CONTINUES

Monsieur Lutard searched his table. I watched him grimly.

"Yet will not find it," I told him. "I saw her pick it up as she passed."

"What shall we do?" he asked. "Keep her waiting for a few minutes and then go to the address she gave you, but nowhere else."

I decided. "I am going to telephone to Ennison, and I shall be there before you. If we see this thing through, we may find out who is at the bottom of it. I will see that you run no risk."

The two drove off together after a brief delay. Ennison, to whom I had telephoned, picked me up in his car. We made one more brief call, and reached the hotel as the taxiab containing Monsieur Lutard and his companion was turning into the other end of the long street. Madame, from behind the glass windows of her bureau, eyed us a little suspiciously as we entered. I engaged her in confidential conversation, however, respecting a suite, and she did not on notice the three or four men who had followed us at intervals into the hotel and who disappeared in various directions. Presently I heard the taxiab stop. I made an excuse, and we hurried into the suite. Janet, followed by Monsieur Lutard, who although he had taken off his hat, held it in front of his face, crossed the door swiftly toward the lift. Madame held out her key, which Janet accepted with a little nod. They passed into the lift, and we heard it ascend. I returned to the bureau. I allowed myself to show much interest.

"But surely, madame," I whispered. "that was Monsieur Lutard, the great statesman, who entered with the lady?"

Madame smiled at us knowingly.

In effect it is he," she admitted. "Madame is the wife of an old client, an American gentleman who left this evening for London."

"A love-affair?" I queried under my breath.

Madame shrugged her shoulders. Her glance was eloquent.

"What can one do?" she murmured. "Only I hope that Monsieur will never desert me. He has a violent temper. Ah! The merciful heavens! It is Monsieur himself who returns! Now there has tragedy arrived indeed!"

Into the hotel, with his coat-tails flying behind him, came a man whom at first I did not recognize. I myself had stepped back out of sight, and I watched the scene.

The door opened. A few of us were almost pushed in. Janet, with her face buried in her hands, turned away. Monsieur Lutard, not wholly at his ease, stood there with folded arms.

"Who are you, sir, and what are you doing in my salon?" Stanfield demanded fiercely.

"I am here at your wife's bidding to receive a message which she assures me that her husband has brought from London," Lutard replied.

"It is a lie!" Stanfield shouted. "I am her husband, and I know nothing of you. It is years since my wife was in London. These are subterfuges. Tell the truth, woman!"

Janet threw herself on the couch and hid her face.

"He is your lover?" Stanfield insisted.

"I could not help it," Janet sobbed. "You have been so cruel lately. Why did you come back?"

There was a little murmur amongst the curious crowd in the background. A thin, dark man with eyeglasses, obviously a journalist, was on the point of stepping away. The time had come for action. I disentangled myself from the group. Stanfield looked into the muzzle of my automatic.

"Hands up, Stanfield!" I ordered. "Close in behind, Ennison. Pass the word down to bolt the doors of the hotel."

I had once come to the conclusion that, no matter how long our duel might continue, I should never see a sign of feeling in my enemy's face. Through his wonderful disguise, however, the real man at this moment leaped out. He stood staring at me, viciously yet with the half-fascinated amazement of one who looks upon a new thing in life. Janet was crouching back upon the couch, shrinking away from me as far as possible, her fingers tearing to pieces some shred of antimacassar. Suddenly she sprang like a cat between her husband and me. He saw his chance and leaped for the door. The crowd of stupefied people opened as though by magic to let him pass. I lowered my pistol and shouted a warning at the top of my voice. There was the sound of a shot below, and the tramping of many feet. A gray-haired, well-dressed man with a red ribbon in his buttonhole, whom I afterward discovered to be the editor of a leading journal, pushed his way through.

"Monsieur," he said to me, "is there any answer to this riddle?"

"You will find it below," I answered shortly. "There has been a plot to compromise the personal honor of Monsieur Lutard here, which you have seen frustrated. The injured husband is an English criminal. His wife—I hesitated—is his accomplice. Monsieur Lutard has never seen either of them before in his life."

Ennison entered, accompanied by Monsieur Lutard's private secretary and a personage whom I recognized as a high official of the French court. There was a great deal of rapid conversation between the four, a mingled outpouring of congratulations and wonder. Then we all moved toward the door. I touched Ennison on the arm.

"What about Stanfield?" I inquired eagerly.

"Escaped for the moment," was the reluctant admission. "He got through the back premises of the hotel, somehow."

They were filing out of the room. I was the last. Janet rose to her feet. She stood there looking at me.

"What happens to me?" she asked.

"There is no charge against you that I am aware of," she declared. "We needed money," she declared. "He had spent everything, and I had only what I earned as a dressmaker. The people who stood behind this affair were generous. It would all have been so easy and so safe if you had not interfered. I begin to think that you are my evil genius, Norman Greyes."

"If you need money to get you back to England," I said, "you can apply to the British consul. I will arrange it for you."

A QUARTER of an hour later we sat among the most cosmopolitan crowd in the world outside the Cafe de la Paix, sipping our absinthe and watching the passers-by.

"A very successful evening's work," Ennison declared thoughtfully.

"So far as it goes," I acquiesced. "After all, though, a man with so many enemies can never be altogether free from danger."

"We have gone tonight farther than you think," my companion assured me. "The agents of the French police who were with us extracted confessions from the hotel proprietor and his wife, among others, which implicate some very well-known people. From this evening Monsieur Lutard is free from the danger of any attempt upon either his life or his honor."

"In that case," I agreed, "our work has indeed been well done."

Many months afterwards a curiously insignificant episode of those next few minutes was brought forcibly to my mind. Near us a very precise and elderly man, with a red ribbon in his buttonhole, raised his hat to Ennison as he passed us. My companion turned his head, and I watched his dignified wandering among the chairs until he found one to his liking. The waiter, seeing him approach, bowed low and hurried away without waiting for his spoken order.

"Who was that?" I inquired curiously.

"An insurance agent in the Rue Scribe," Ennison replied. "His name, I think, is Gaston Lefevre."

"A type," I observed.

"There are many here," he asserted.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

Nancy and Nick stood looking at Jack Straw's house spinning around on top of a steeple in Mix-Up Land.

That is the last place it had jumped to.

"I know what I'll do," cried Nick. "I'll break another of the eggs that the Cut-Out Lady gave us."

So he broke an egg.

Instantly a ladder appeared and as quickly hopped away toward the steeple, leaving itself up obligingly against the wall.

"Hurry, Nancy. We'll climb it and get to Jack Straw's house," said Nick, starting to run.

"I suppose you know what you are doing, but I'd be careful if I were you," said a voice.

They saw a purple rooster, looking at them through a large pair of spectacles.

"Why, said Nancy.

"Because if Jack Straw sees you and turns his magic ring, the ladder will tumble about your ears and then where will you be?"

"I'll break another egg and see what happens," said Nick. So he broke another egg and out tumbled a feather-bed.

"Cock-a-doodle-doo!" crowed the rooster. "Wonder what kind of a hen laid those eggs? They surely ought to bring more than 60 cents a setting!"

"Now I know where we'll be if we fall!" cried Nancy. "On the feather bed! Come, Nick, let's hurry."

"But sposh," put in the rooster, "sposh" mean old Jack Straw turns his ring another time and a wind comes and blows all the feathers away."

"I'll break another egg and see," said Nick.

So he broke another egg, the last one, and what do you think?

There was only a piece of paper in it.

"Well, I declare!" said the rooster. "I guess our troubles will be over soon and Mix-Up Land will be Apple-Pie Land again. That's the very manner I've been searching for. It tells how to get rid of that rogue, Jack Straw."

LETTER FROM MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT TO HER SON, JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

MY DEAR SON:
I confess I had the greatest pang of my life when I read the enclosed clipping announcing your coming marriage to the daughter of some family totally unknown to me.

I had always dreamed that my son would be the first to confide to me that he would like to marry. It has been one of my illusions that you would bring the girl to me, your mother, before you even asked the momentous question. You might have your impulsive choice confirmed by the mature judgment of the mother who has your best interests at heart.

The enclosed clipping was sent to me by dear Priscilla Bradford, who is visiting your third cousin, Mary Alden, in Sharon.

Priscilla writes that your fiancée, Miss Hamilton, belongs to what is called the smart set of Sharon. She describes them as "a little coterie of people who all have a good deal of money which in most cases must make up for a lack of birth and breeding."

She did not say that the Hamiltons are one of these "cases" and I cannot bring myself to think that they are, for surely a lineal descendant of John Alden could not select a wife from those who by accident of money only have become a part of that more or less spurious class we call American aristocracy.

I am grievously hurt, John, that you have seen fit to let your mother become aware of this momentous event in your life through another. Surely, after you, I am the one most interested.

Priscilla said in her letter that you probably had written me, for ever since Leslie (What a queer name!) Hamilton (is she a descendant of that illegitimate Alexander Hamilton who fought a duel with Aaron Burr?) arrived home, there has been nothing in the society columns of the newspapers except accounts of the parties that have been given for her, and the elaborate trousseau she is preparing.

She even sent me a clipping which said that Miss Leslie had purchased a nightdress which was the replica of the wedding nightdress of a recent royal bride. I cannot bring myself to send that to a man, even if that man be my son.

I hope that Miss Hamilton's father has properly avenged this insult to his daughter ere this, upon the editor of this terrible newspaper.

Jeep, up to this time, the women of your family have always prided themselves that their names have appeared in the newspapers.

three times, and then only with a dignified reticence—once when they were born, once when they were married, and once when they were buried. I cannot get used to this blatant notoriety with which the modern young woman rushes into print. It seems to go with the paint and powder and vulgar dressing which is affected by the modern miss.

I was always in hope that when the time came for you to choose a wife, John, your choice would fall upon dear Priscilla Bradford. She has all the characteristics that go to make up a good wife. You have known her since you were children and she would supply that stability of character that I am seriously afraid you lack.

But, alas, mothers are not consulted nowadays. I have known very little about you since you entered business at Albany. I expect I am old-fashioned, and out-of-date in both principles and ideas, but at least, John, I deserve some consideration from you, for I am your MOTHER.

NIGHT WIRE FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO HIS MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT

Forgive me, mother dear, for not writing before, but I wanted to send you full particulars when I wrote and I have been so busy that I did not seem to find the time for a long letter. Letter is now in the mails. Do not let the insinuation of that narrow-minded Priscilla Bradford prejudice you against the sweetest girl in all the world. The paragraph, Priscilla sent you were just bits of the modern newspaper sensationalism. Leslie is probably the most popular girl in Sharon and as such every movement of her adorable eyes would be considered news at this time. Rest assured, mother dear, I would not have married Priscilla had she been the best woman on earth. I know I am shocking you with this telegram, but I am incensed at Priscilla Bradford and even a little annoyed at you, my dear mother, that you could not understand the animus of her communication. You will understand when you see Leslie why I love her, but I am sure you will not understand any more than I do why such a wonderful girl as she could consent to marry such an average chap as your son.

LETTER FROM MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT TO HER SON, JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

MY DEAR SON:

I confess I had the greatest pang of my life when I read the enclosed clipping announcing your coming marriage to the daughter of some family totally unknown to me.

I had always dreamed that my son would be the first to confide to his mother when he found a girl that he would like to marry. It has been one of my illusions that you would bring the girl to me, your mother, before you even asked the momentous question. You might have your impulsive choice confirmed by the mature judgment of the mother who has your best interests at heart.

The enclosed clipping was sent to me by dear Priscilla Bradford, who is visiting your third cousin, Mary Alden, in Sharon.

Priscilla writes that your fiancée, Miss Hamilton, belongs to what is called the smart set of Sharon. She describes them as "a little coterie of people who all have a good deal of money which in most cases must make for a lack of birth and breeding."

She did not say that the Hamiltons are one of these "cases" and I cannot bring myself to think that they are, for surely a lineal descendant of John Alden could not select a wife from those who by accident of money only have become a part of that more or less spurious class we call American aristocracy.

I am gravely hurt, John, that you have seen fit to let your mother become aware of this momentous event in your life through another. Surely, after you, I am the one most interested.

Priscilla said in her letter that you probably had written me, for, ever since Leslie (What a queer name!) Hamilton (Is she a descendant of that illegitimate Alexander Hamilton who fought a duel with Aaron Burr?) arrived home, there has been nothing in the society columns of the newspapers except accounts of the parties that have been given for her, and the elaborate trousseau she is preparing.

She even sent me a clipping which said that Miss Leslie had purchased a nightdress which was the replica of the wedding nightdress of a recent royal bride. I cannot bring myself to send that to a man, even if that man be my son.

I hope that Miss Hamilton's father has properly avenged this insult to his daughter ere his, upon the editor of this terrible newspaper.

Then, up to this time, the women of your family have always prided themselves that their names have appeared in the newspapers.

three times, and then only with a dignified reticence—once when they were born, once when they were married, and once when they were buried. I cannot get used to this blatant notoriety with which the modern young woman rushes into print. It seems to go with the paint and powder and vulgar dressing which is affected by the modern miss.

It was always in hope that when the time came for you to choose a wife, John, your choice would fall upon dear Priscilla Bradford. She has all the characteristics that go to make up a good wife. You have known her since you were children and she would supply that stability of character that I am seriously afraid you lack.

But, alas, mothers are not consulted nowadays. I have known very little about you since you entered business at Albany. I expect I am old-fashioned, and out-of-date in both principles and ideas, but at least, John, I deserve some consideration from you, for I am your MOTHER.

Forgive me, mother dear, for not writing before, but I wanted to send you full particulars when I wrote and I have been so busy that I did not seem to find the time for a long letter. Letter is now in the mails. Do not let the insinuations of that narrow-minded Priscilla Bradford prejudice you against the sweetest girl in all the world. The paragraphs Priscilla sent you were just bits of the modern newspaper sensationalism. Leslie is probably the most popular girl in Sharon and as such every movement of her adorable eyelashes would be considered news at this time. Rest assured, mother dear, I would not have married Priscilla had she been the last woman on earth. I know I am shocking you with this telegram, but I am incensed at Priscilla Bradford and even a little annoyed at you, my dear mother, that you could not understand the animus of her communication. You will understand when you see Leslie why I love her, but I am sure you will not understand any more than I do why such a wonderful girl as she could consent to marry such an average chap as your son.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER

WHAT THEIR ACTION SHOWS

The additional vetoes made by the Governor of institutional appropriations are reported to have been made with consent and in some cases on recommendation of the heads of the institutions. The action of the institutional heads who did join in an effort to reduce the state's expenses appears to be praiseworthy. But it may also indicate either that they were willing to make sacrifices, or that the assertions of the North Dakota Taxpayers Association and others that tax money is spent for naught in many institutions is justified. Few of the appropriations, it is understood, were higher than the budget, and practically none higher than was recommended by institutional heads before the legislature. If it was necessary for the institutional heads to await the executive mandate before agreeing that appropriations were higher than necessary their action is not praiseworthy but is a confession.

It must be admitted, that the method of making appropriations for running the state government is unsatisfactory. Without adequate information and spurred by a suddenly developed sentiment, legislatures often will cut deeper than they should, and often will leave items lower than is justified. An example may be seen in the appropriations for the state railroad commission. Here is a body that is given supervision of one hundred million dollars worth of property in North Dakota, that has power to raise or lower rates in public utilities amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. Utility rates went upward during the war and post-war period. A period of readjustment now is in progress all over the nation and utility rates ought to be adjusted to meet the changed conditions. Yet the legislature gave the railroad commission inadequate finances and facilities to make a proper readjustment. The economy in this instance may have been "penny wise and pound foolish."

It is difficult to suggest any better method than giving the people's representatives the final decision in the matter of appropriations, with the executive holding veto power. Perhaps the situation may be accepted as one of the difficulties of putting business methods in government. Except for those legislators who are willing to trade the state's money to get some for their own constituency, the members of the legislature generally are imbued with the purpose of serving the state best in making appropriations.

If heads of many state institutions have found it possible, when pressed by the chief executive, to dispense with appropriation items without crippling their institutions, perhaps the county, city, township and school authorities in every part of the state may be able to do the same, and in so doing to render a real service to the state in placing it again on the lowest level of taxation possible.

In the manner of pruning unnecessary items, Governor Nestos has performed an able service. Unfortunately some appropriations were so lumped as to be immune from executive veto.

A SORRY SPECTACLE

The adage that "where there's smoke there's fire" may or may not hold true in the charges and counter-charges made regarding the Cass county grand jury investigation into the affairs of the Scandinavian-American Bank. Perhaps the smoke is simply a smoke-screen. But the situation does call forcibly to mind that thousands of people in North Dakota in the last few years—on all sides of the political fence—have come to look upon public office as a means of executing political vengeance and upon the many courts as being actuated by political motives in many decisions. Such violation of public office, if it is proved, should be so reprehensible to all people that they will rise to smite any violator, regardless of politics, ability or position.

MUMMY

If you could unwind the long strips of cloth and papyrus from King Tut's mummy, you'd find a black and shriveled corpse more like a charred far statue than the remains of a man.

The popular notion, about the marvels of ancient Egyptian embalming, is nine-tenths bunk. Any modern undertaker, using the best methods and fluids, can excel the embalmers of King Tut's time.

COMPETITOR

Do you remember, when the war ended, a wave of fear swept our country that Germany would corner the world's foreign trade?

Reduced to value in American dollars, our exports last year totaled about four times as much as Germany's.

This illustrates, that we live in an age of false alarms. Great crises threaten us, one after another. You have observed that they do not materialize. "Nerves" make us dread the chimeras.

"SMUT"

Police charge that thousands of copies of an obscene book called "Smut" have been sold to Chicago high school boys and girls. Discussing this, many grownups will shake their heads and comment that the rising generation certainly is going to pot.

The same grown-ups may recall reading Boccaccio and such booklets as "Only a Boy" when they were young. Strike an average and the youngsters are just about the same in one generation as another.

SUN

Grossman, young New York scientist, thinks he has found a way to "can sunlight"—store the sun's energy and keep it until needed, even at distant places. Whether he has it or not, it will come, just a matter of time.

Meantime, in coal and crops, we have a more perfect form of "canned sunlight" than the inventors ever will discover.

Grossman's claim calls attention to this: The chief motive of civilization at present is to find cheap power.

MIXED POLITICS

With fellows like L. L. Twitchell of Cass county boring from within the anti-league forces, and Lemke Baker and Church doing the same in the League camp, both forces seem ready for several protracted pet to either appeal.

Twitchell has abandoned almost every newspaperman in the state by his attitude on laws affecting their business. When both the League and the anti-league newspaper associations jointly offered a bill to the legislature which would reduce by several hundred per cent the excessive price which by some error was allowed for printing delinquent taxes, and when the same associations offered also an amendment providing for a reduction in the publication of school treasurers' reports, their business was met by a demand for a general reduction on all legal notices which would wipe out every cent of profit entirely. And Twitchell of the L. V. A. led the fight against the new paper men. His idea seems to be to make the newspaper so poor that they will be more amenable to influence. None of the country newspapers with which legal notices mean no small income, has been accused of being unduly rich. No country editor buys a new pair of pants on account of any particular wear and tear on the soul part.

It would have been calamity if Twitchell had been accepted as speaker of the house this session. Unless he gets eliminated from L. V. A. politics he'll make an Andy Gump out of T. G. Nelson and put the party on latrine detail.

The rift in the melodious lute-tuned by the Leagues comes over the promised recall of Nestos.

The present League convention seemed to be in favor of the recall of Nestos. Some of the League leaders headed by Lemke. Those who were not in favor of the recall were not of course in favor of Nestos, but they saw something larger for the League to do than engage in child-like spite through a recall. Their feelings were fittingly stated in the words: "Let 'em stew in their own juice"; presuming in their own League was that this "juice" was something concocted by the L. V. A. administration which would burn, boil and dissolve all future evidence of IVA existence.

The proper proceeding for each party is to put both Lemke and Twitchell in an old King Tut's tomb and seal it for another 3,000 years. Killdeer Herald (Independent).

GOVERNOR IS PEEVED

The governor of Florida is very much peeved because the legislature of North Dakota passed a resolution condemning the flaming to death of a North Dakota young man in one of the convict camps of that state. A young man from Cavalier county, who had been fined for vagrancy and sentenced to jail and was afterwards farmed out to a lumber camp contractor and then mistreated in that camp until he died. The Florida executive says that the resolution passed by the North Dakota legislature is going to give his state some very undesirable publicity and that he thinks our legislature went too far. The governor says that no state treats its convicts better than does Florida. We will say that if they treat them all the same way that the North Dakota young man was treated it is very effective treatment. The State of North Dakota is not blaming the Florida governor in the least but is not altogether responsible for what some of the officials of that state do, but as head of that state government he is responsible for what actually happened in that camp, and until the authorities of Florida bring the guilty party or parties who are responsible for the heinous crime committed to the bar of justice and deal with them according to the enormity of the crime committed, the people of this state will pay no attention to the crocodile tears of the governor and his protestations that criminals are treated better in Florida than in any state in the union. Action spread louder than words, and what we want is action and the guilty person or persons punished. North Dakota legislature is not passing resolutions unless it has very good grounds for so doing, we would advise the governor of the alligatore state. Valley City Times-Record

TO GO ON WITH STORY

 Monsieur Lutard searched his table. I watched him grinning. "You will not find it," I told him. "I saw her pick it up as she passed."

"What shall we do?" he asked. "Keep her waiting for a few minutes and then go to the address," he gave you, but nowhere else." I decided. "I am going to telephone to Ennison, and I shall be there before you. If we see this thing through, we may find out who is at the bottom of it. I will see that you run no risk."

The two drove off together after a brief delay. Ennison, to whom I had telephoned, picked me up in his car. We made one more brief call, and reached the hotel as the taxicab containing Monsieur Lutard and his companion was turning into the other end of the long street. Madame, from behind the glass windows of her bureau, eyed us a little suspiciously as we entered. I engaged her in confidential conversation, however, respecting a suite, and she did not on notice the three or four men who had followed us at intervals to the hotel and who disappeared in various directions. Presently I heard the taxicab stop. I made an excuse and we hurried into the suite. Monsieur Lutard, followed by Monsieur Ennison, who although he had taken off his hat, held it in front of his face, crossed the floor swiftly toward the lift. Madame held out her key, which Janet accepted with a little nod. They passed into the lift, and we heard it ascend. I returned to the bureau. I allowed myself to show much interest.

"But surely, madame," I whispered, "that was Monsieur Lutard, the great statesman, who entered with the lady?" Madame smiled at us knowingly. "In effect it is he," she admitted. "Madame is the wife of an old client, an American for London." "A love-affair?" I queried under my breath.

Madame shrugged her shoulders. Her glance was eloquent. "What can one do?" she murmured. "Only I hope that Monsieur will never discover. He has a violent temper. Ah! The merciful heavens! It is Monsieur himself who returns!" Now there has tragically arrived indeed!

Into the hotel, with his coat-tails flying behind him, came a man whom at first I did not recognize. I myself had stepped back out of sight, and I watched the scene.

THE HONOR OF M. LUTARD

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Vendetta began between MICHAEL SAYERS, noted criminal, and SIR NORMAN GREYES, once of Scotland Yard, when Sayers' beautiful housemaid, JANET, saved him from Sir Norman by shooting dead the officer sent to arrest him. Janet became Sayers' wife and accomplice. In the London Hunt robbery, Michael (known to Greys as "Stanfield") barely escapes and has to flee the country. Sayers plots with another well known criminal, Paul Gont, to ruin the political leader, Philippe Lutard. Gont sends for Janet to help the government to protect Lutard. Janet calls on Lutard at night with a letter asking him to communicate with a friend who has important information. Lutard promises to follow Janet, then finds that the letter brought by her has disappeared.

"What shall we do?" he asked. "Keep her waiting for a few minutes and then go to the address," he gave you, but nowhere else." I decided. "I am going to telephone to Ennison, and I shall be there before you. If we see this thing through, we may find out who is at the bottom of it. I will see that you run no risk."

Madame shrugged her shoulders. Her glance was eloquent. "What can one do?" she murmured. "Only I hope that Monsieur will never discover. He has a violent temper. Ah! The merciful heavens! It is Monsieur himself who returns!" Now there has tragically arrived indeed!

Into the hotel, with his coat-tails flying behind him, came a man whom at first I did not recognize. I myself had stepped back out of sight, and I watched the scene.

The door opened. A few of us were almost pushed in. Janet, with her face buried in her hands, turned away. Monsieur Lutard, not wholly at his ease, stood there with folded arms. "Who are you, sir, and what are you doing in my salon?" Stanfield demanded fiercely. "I am here at your wife's bidding to receive a message which she assures me that her husband has brought from London," Lutard replied. "It is a lie!" Stanfield shouted. "I am her husband, and I know nothing of you. It is years since my wife was in London. These are subtleties. Tell the truth, woman!" Janet threw herself on the couch and hid her face. "He is your lover?" Stanfield insisted. "I could not help it," Janet sobbed. "You have been so cruel lately. Why did you come back?" There was a little murmur amongst the curious crowd in the background. A thin, dark man with eyeglasses, obviously a journalist, was on the point of stealing away. The time had come for action. I disentangled myself from the group. Stanfield looked into the muzzle of my automatic. "Stand up, Stanfield," I ordered. "Close in behind, Ennison. Pass the word down to bolt the doors of the hotel."

I had once come to the conclusion that, no matter how long our duel might continue, I should never see a sign of feeling in my enemy's face. Through his wonderful disguise, however, the real man at this moment leaped out. He stood staring at me, viciously yet with the half-fascinated amazement of one who looks upon a new thing in life. Janet was crouching back upon the couch, shrinking away from me as far as possible, her fingers tearing at pieces some shreds of antimacassar. Suddenly she sprang like a cat between her husband and me. He saw his chance and leaped for the door. The crowd of stupefied people opened as though by magic to let him pass. I lowered my pistol and shouted a warning at the top of my voice. There was the sound of a shot below, and the tramping of many feet. A gray-haired, well-dressed man with a red ribbon in his buttonhole, whom I afterward discovered to be the editor of a leading journal, pushed his way through. "Monsieur," he said to me, "is there any answer to this riddle?" "You will find it below," I answered shortly. "There has been a plot to compromise the personal honor of Monsieur Lutard here, which you have seen frustrated. The injured husband is an English criminal. His wife—I hesitated—"is his accomplice. Monsieur Lutard has never seen either of them before in his life."

Ennison entered, accompanied by Monsieur Lutard's private secretary and a personage whom I recognized as a high official of the French court. There was a great deal of rapid conversation between the four, a mingled outpouring of congratulations and wonder. Then we all moved toward the door. I touched Ennison on the arm. "What about Stanfield?" I inquired eagerly. "Escaped for the moment," was the reluctant admission. "He got through the back premises of the hotel, somehow."

They were filing out of the room. I was the last. Janet rose to her feet. She stood there looking at me. "What happens to me?" she asked. "There is no charge against you that I am aware of," I replied. "We needed money," she declared. "He had spent everything, and I had only what I earned as a dressmaker. The people who stood behind this affair were generous. It would all have been so easy and so safe if you had not interfered. I begin to think that you are my evil genius, Norman Greves."

"If you need money to get you back to England," I said, "you can apply to the British consul. I will arrange it for you."

A QUARTER of an hour later we sat among the most cosmopolitan crowd in the world outside the Cafe de la Paix, sipping our absinthe and watching the passers-by. "A very successful evening's work," Ennison declared thoughtfully. "As far as it goes," I acquiesced. "After all, though, a man with so many enemies can never be altogether free from danger."

"We have gone tonight farther than you think," my companion assured me. "The agents of the French police who were with us extracted confessions from the hotel proprietor and his wife, among other things, which implicate some very well-known people."

Evening Monsieur Lutard is free from the danger of any attempt upon either his life or his honor. "In that case," I agreed, "our work has indeed been well done."

Many months afterward a curiously insignificant episode of those next few minutes was brought forcibly to my mind. Near us a very pretty and elderly man, with a red ribbon in his buttonhole, raised his hat to Ennison as he passed us. My companion returned his salute, and I watched his dignified wandering among the chairs until he found one to his liking. The waiter, seeing him approach, bowed low and hurried away without waiting for his spoken order.

"Who was that?" I inquired curiously. "An insurance agent in the Rue Scribe," Ennison replied. "His name, I think, is Gaston Lefevre."

"A type," I observed. "There are many here," he assented.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

Nancy and Nick stood looking at Jack Straw's house spinning around on top of a steep in Mix-Up Land. That is the last place it had jumped to. "I know what I'll do," cried Nick. "I'll break another of the eggs that the Cut-Out Lady gave us." So he broke an egg. Instantly a ladder appeared and as quickly hopped away toward the steep, leaning itself up obligingly against the wall. "Hurry, Nancy. We'll climb it and get to Jack Straw's house," said Nick, starting to run. "I suppose you know what you are doing, but I'd be careful if I were you," said a voice.

There stood a purple rooster, looking at them through a large pair of spectacles. "Why, said Nancy. "Because if Jack Straw sees you and turns his magic ring, the ladder will tumble about your ears and then where will you be?" "I'll break another egg and see what happens," said Nick. So he broke another egg and out tumbled a feather-bed.

"Cock-a-doodle-doo!" crowed the rooster. "I wonder what kind of a hen laid those eggs? They surely ought to bring more than 60 cents a setting!"

"Now I know where we'll be if we fall!" cried Nancy. "On the feather bed! Come, Nick, let's hurry!" "But apoon," put in the rooster, "apoon mean old Jack Straw turns his ring another time and a wind comes and blows all the feathers away."

"I'll break another egg and see," said Nick. So he broke another egg, the last one, and what do you think? There was only a piece of paper in it.

"Well, I declare!" said the rooster. "I guess our troubles will be over soon and Mix-Up Land will be Apple-Pie Land again. That's the very best I've been searching for. It tells how to get rid of that rogue, Jack Straw."

TEXARKANA.

Texarkana, Tex.-Ark.

The highways stretch across the land. From there to here, from here to there; But right and left on either hand Are cross-ways leading everywhere. They make you sort of want to know Where do the little cross-roads go?

The highways show upon the maps. They pass through cities and through states. The little roads—they may perhaps Lead to a mansion's splendid gates, Or to a cottage snug and low, Where do the little cross-roads go?

The stream of traffic passes by. Few are the cars that ever turn. To follow where the byways lie Yet had I time I'd like to learn Whether they wander, to and fro, Where do the little cross-roads go?

To camps in forest places wild, To tiny hamlets and the trees, To spots where fortune never smiled, To myriads of goals like these; There roads may turn and twist—Heigho! Where do the little cross-roads go?

MOISTURE IN SOUTH GIVES WHEAT SLUMP

Chicago, Mar. 12.—Wheat the highest figures today May delivery has reached in the last two weeks. The advance was ascribed in a measure to the purchase of 1,350,000 bushels of Canadian wheat for shipment to Europe. Close firm with May, $1.20 1/4 to $1.20 1/2 and July, $1.15 1/2.

Chicago, Mar. 12.—Rain and snow likely to benefit the domestic winter wheat crop led to price declines today in the early dealings today. The effect of values, however, was more or less off-set owing to the fact that Liverpool quotations showed a slight advance.

Trade was light and the market easily influenced. Opening prices, which varied from the same as Saturday's finish to 3/4 of a cent lower with May, $1.19 1/4 to $1.19 1/2, and July, $1.14 1/2 to $1.14 3/4, were followed by a general sag and then to a good rally.

Subsequently word that western Kansas and western Oklahoma had failed to receive any moisture of consequence led to an advance and so, too, did evidence of better demand from Europe.

PANDOLFO TO GO TO PRISON FOR 10 YEARS

Highest Court in Land Refuses to Review His Case Of Mail Frauds

TRIED YEARS AGO

Washington, Mar. 12.—The supreme court today declined to review the case of Samuel C. Pandolfo, convicted in Chicago of fraudulent use of the mails in promoting the Pan Motor Car Company which had its plant at St. Cloud, Minnesota.

TRIED YEARS AGO

Chicago, Mar. 12.—Samuel C. Pandolfo, who was held of the Pan Motor Car Company of St. Cloud, Minn., must serve a term of 10 years in Leavenworth, Kan. prison and pay fines aggregating $4,000 as a result of the United States Supreme Court's refusal to review his case. Pandolfo was convicted in federal court here several years ago, although the company had a plant at St. Cloud and actually had engaged in manufacture the government charged in the trial that only a few trucks and cars were made, and that stock selling had been the principal occupation rather than manufacture of the company's products.

Stock in the company was sold in many state, and Pandolfo made a vigorous fight for freedom, carrying his case to the Circuit Court of Appeals here and then to the supreme court. He was fined $1,000 on each of four counts and sentenced to serve five years on each of the four counts, but the court ordered that the sentences on counts 1 and 2 should run concurrently, and that likewise the sentences on counts 3 and 4 should run concurrently.

SHIPSTEAD TO TAKE SEAT AS A REPUBLICAN

Washington, March 12.—One of the big questions in the political lineup of the senate in the 68th congress was answered this week.

Dr. Shipstead, senator-elect from Minnesota, will be a Republican, regardless of the fact he was elected on the Farmer-Labor ticket. The senate chamber is ready to receive the new senator, although that body is not expected to convene until next December. On the Republican side are 54 seats and on the Democratic side, 42 seats. Each desk has a name plate.

Dr. Shipstead's seat is as far from the Democratic side as it possibly could be.

Immediately in front of Shipstead will be Dr. Ladd, one of North Dakota's pair of Nonpartisan leaguers elected as Republicans. To Shipstead's left will be Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota, then Couzens of Michigan, whose radical tendencies in some directions are pronounced, followed by Fess of Ohio, ardent administration supporter, with Howell of Nebraska, another radical, next, then Green of Vermont, a conservative, and finally Smith Wildman Brookhart of Iowa.

HOLD DAM NOT FLOOD CAUSE

Dickinson, N. D., Mar. 12.—It was the belief of Mandan people that the break-up of the Heart was precipitated by the collapse of the small dam near the Russell-Miller mill at Dickinson which went out early last Friday morning. Local engineers, however, deny this claim, stating that this river was not affected for more than a mile. The Missouri river bottom was entirely flooded and train service on the Mandan-Mott branch of the Northern Pacific was annulled for a day.

No damage was done in Dickinson, with the exception of the destruction of the dam and a private bridge owned by the Dickinson Fire & Pressed Brick company which went out when the dam broke.

10 CO-OP BANKS IN OPERATION SUCCESSFUL

"Service" Is Keynote of Banks Operated by Railroad Brotherhood

Cleveland, O., Mar. 12.—Depositors share in the profits of the ten co-operative banks situated in different sections of this country controlled and operated by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, while dividends to stockholders are strictly limited, according to a statement issued today by Warren S. Stone, president of the brotherhood and also president of the parent institution of the organization, the Cleveland bank.

In addition to the ten banks already organized and doing a flourishing business, six other banks are in process of organization, including the Empire Trust company of New York of which the brotherhood has recently purchased "a considerable interest," according to Leroy W. Baldwin, president of the Empire Trust company.

In explaining the meaning of the co-operative bank, Mr. Stone says: "The desire for profit shall be supplanted by the motive of service in handling the people's money. The last report of the Comptroller of the Currency shows that nearly $13 out of every $14 constituting the $54,913,000,000 banking resources of the country were contributed by depositors. They are the customers who make the prosperity of the bank. They have a right to share in that prosperity. For this reason co-operative banks strictly limit the dividend that can be paid to shareholders, and after setting aside the necessary reserve, distribute their surplus earnings proportionately among their depositors."

Furthermore, "the great majority of depositors are farmers and wage earners, the policy of the co-operative bank is to use their deposits to promote their prosperity in common with that of the whole business community. In other words, the farmers' marketing associations and the workers' co-operative organizations get a square deal at the co-operative banks, just as do the business men who need credit for productive purposes. There are no insiders, no favorites to play, no utilization of the people's money to underwrite speculative enterprises."

"Two years ago there was not a single co-operative bank in the United States. Today there are ten in successful operation and six more now organizing. Within the space of 26 months the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' bank has increased resources from $653,000 to $19,000,000."

"Less than 14 per cent of the deposits in the Brotherhood banks are from members of labor organizations."

The Cleveland Brotherhood bank is believed to be the first bank in this country to declare a co-operative dividend to the depositors. One-half of one per cent co-operative dividends have been announced to depositors every six months since the bank was organized 26 months ago, four such dividends having been paid. These dividends, compounded semi-annually, are in addition to the regular four per cent interest paid depositors, compounded quarterly.

The "hoax" was made possible through the aid of a hot water bottle of the same color as the girl's nightdress.

AT THE MOVIES

THE ELTINGE

Prominent plays and prominent people will be seen at the Eltinge theatre for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. In the picture world Betty Compson, Bert Lytell, May MacAvoy and Walter Long are among the widest known. The picture in which they appear, "Kick In" is from the famous stage play, same title, by Willard Mack. Within the past month, no individual in the world, outside of King Tut, rank amen (and he's dead) has received the attention given Dr. Coue. ### CAPITOL

"The Ninety and Nine," which will be shown at Capitol theater tonight is a real smashing special and oh, what a thriller! Given first a smashing plot, full of the big scenes that lead logically, and with the utmost of suspense, up to the big climax, Director Smith made the most of his material.

The big, record-breaking thrill is the rescue of an entire country, side from the fury of the flames, as the forest fire races towards the surrounded town. It is destined to be received as one of the finest things of its kind ever seen on the screen. Great stretches of burning forest, whole towns in flames, hundreds of men, women and children running frantically to cover. The little telegraph office is besieged with shouting, cursing, praying men, demanding an engine to take the trapped inhabitants to safety. There is not an engine on the division. Beside himself, the dispatcher remembers that an official's engine, with a private car, is on the siding at the nearest station. But the official declares it is a fool's chance, and will not permit the use of the engine. Then the one man appears—the young derelict, who chances to be on the scene. Without hesitation he rolls the steel monster out on the main track, and heads into the furnace of roaring flames ahead.
